

Moving with Pets Just Got a Little Easier

In response to their recent survey indicating that a large portion of Foreign Service employees often face problems when moving pets from post to post. The American Foreign Service Association (AFSA) has partnered with PetRelocation.com to offer its members a new benefit that will help them make a smooth move with their pets.

The Texas-based company is offering a 10 percent discount off any pet move, international or domestic, to all AFSA members who contact the company at a dedicated email address: afsa@petrelocation.com.

AFSA customers will be assigned a pet relocation specialist who will work with each individual throughout the duration of the move. To welcome AFSA members who may be moving with their pets, PetRelocation.com is offering a free Pet Relocation Preparation Guide, available exclusively to AFSA members on their website. The guide also includes an invitation to www.PetRelocation.com complimentary Rabies Reminder Service, which will help Foreign Service employees keep track of their pets' rabies vaccination dates. PetRelocation.com has extensive experience in transporting pets door-to-door in both domestic and international settings and has moved everything from cats and dogs to birds and fish.

AFSA has recently updated its website (www.afsa.org) to include more resources related to pet travel and pet ownership in the Foreign Service.
